GUARDS REMAIN ON DUTY AT OHIO STATE "PEN" TODAY

Nearly 1,000 National Guardsmen Are Detailed To Duty

ATMOSPHERE IS TENSE

Two Convicts Wounded, One Seriously, in Pitched Battle

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 30.—The iron hand of the militia ruled Ohio penitentiary today after more than a week of tumult, climaxed yesterday when National Guardsmen entered the prison to put down the mutiny, an aftermath of the death of 320 convicts in the fire a week ago Monday.

With nearly 1,000 National Guards-
men, led by Colonel Robert Haubrich, detailed to duty inside and outside the prison walls, the situation has been quiet since prison guards rained bullets into the prisoners' ranks and ended an attack on the barred doors of
"white city," the idle house.

An atmosphere of tensely still was evident, and the revolting convicts, idle since the fire, apparently had not entirely abandoned their "passive resistance" movement by which they hoped to bring about the removal of Warden Preston E. Thomas.

After Colonel Haubrich had led his men into the prison, the staff of prison guards went to the outside, leaving the soldiers in complete charge.
A few of the guards returned today.
Prison officials were investigating a guard's statement that the first shot was fired by a convict. Warden Thomas said the guard, whose name was withheld, told him that no shooting occurred until a bullet came from the direction of the cell blocks.

Two convicts were wounded, one seriously, as the bullets scattered their ranks. George Tonoff, of Toledo, was near death with shots through the lung, groin and hips, while Jewell Joffa, Lucas county, was recovering from a leg injury.

Pending repair of the idle house cell
blocks, broken during the disorders,
the insurgents will be placed in a barbed wire stockade in the prison yard. Guards started erecting the stockade last night to have it ready for the convicts this morning. Within the enclosure the men will have a steel building in which to sleep.
Deadlines will be established and guarded by the troops.

It was indicated the soldiers will remain on duty until the mutineers return to the cell block and are brought under discipline.

Milling about with other prisoners in "white city" yesterday were four men under death sentence who were released by the convicts. All were

Body of Barge Captain Found on Shore of River

The body of George Townsend, barge
captain, who disappeared three weeks ago, was found yesterday on the shore of the Delaware River at Florence, N.
J. Authorities believe that he fell from a boat and was drowned. Townsend was skipper of a barge in a fleet of sand boats at the Penns Manor plant. When he was missed a crew dragged the river, but could not locate him.

Philip Quigley, of Florence, found
the body and identification was made through a slip of paper in his pocket containing the name and address of his wife in Seaford, Del. Townsend was 40 years old.

Blazing Poles Give Firemen Plenty of Work

A lot of blazing poles in the store
yard of the Philadelphia Electric Company, South Bristol, gave firemen considerable work and also attracted a large crowd of spectators near midnight.

Just south of Bristol borough there is a large pile of electric light poles
which have been treated with creosote.
These in some way caught fire and flames leaped high into the air.

At 11:48 Consolidated firemen were summoned and went into very quick service and extinguished the flames.

The firemen put a pumper into service at once and laid 1300 feet of hose.
Strong streams were played on the burning mass until the flames had been extinguished.

An examination this morning showed that about 40 poles had been considerably burned at the butt and will have to be cut off in order to be of use.

Reflection of the flames attracted a large crowd of spectators and fire companies came from nearby towns,
including Croydon, Cornwells Heights, Newportville and Bristol.

YOUTH HAS ALWAYS PLAYED IMPORTANT PART IN AFFAIRS OF BOROUGH OF HULMEVILLE; DURING THE WORLD WAR PERIOD 33 ANSWERED NATION'S CALL

Young Men Comprising Baseball Team Won Tri-County
League Baseball Championship for Two Successive
Years—Town, It is Believed, Has Bright Future

Herewith is presented the sixth and concluding installment of an interesting and informative article concerning the Borough of Hulmeville.

Youth has always played an important part in the affairs of the town, and in time of need taken its place in the world of affairs. When the call came for volunteers at the time of America's entrance into the World War, Hulmeville's best went into the service. Residents of the town backed up their country in every way possible, the young women meeting weekly to make bandages for use over-seas,
and participating in other Red Cross activities. Men and women, and children as well, subscribed to War Stamps, Liberty Loans, etc. When the young men and young women came back from participation in the great war a rousing welcome home celebration took place, this being in the summer of 1919. The entire town made a holiday, and took part in the festivities at Hulmeville Park.

Later a tablet was placed on a concrete base at the Hulmeville side of the bridge, upon which are the names of the following, those who served their country in the army, navy, marine corps, and nursing department:
George W. Bennett, Clarence M.
Brown, William C. Blessing, John R.
LeCompte, Clarence D. Dayhoff, Morris P. Dayhoff, Russell S. Dayhoff, Harry J. Goheen, Harry S. Gill, William K. Harrison, Jr., G. Russell Harrison, John K. Harrison, J. Donald Hockman, C. Wesley Haefer, Edwin
W. Henry, Jr., Edward R. Henry, R.
Ross MacIver, Joseph F. Korinsak,
Thomas B. Longhurst, R. Randolph
Paxon, M. D. Jesse W. Soby, Thomas
K. Schatt, Frank C. Schneider, Carolyne H. Sherry (nurse), Arthur R.
Spicer, John B. Taylor, Charles H.
Vearling, Hugh B. Webster, John C.
Wilson, W. Rogers Watson, Frank W.
Watters, Frederick A. Williams, Kathleen A. Wilson (nurse).

In memory of Jesse W. Soby, who lost his life in France while in his country's service, is the Jesse W. Soby Post, No. 148, American Legion, with headquarters at Langhorne, named.

Young men of Hulmeville for two successive years won in the Tri-County League baseball group, 1927
and 1928. Teams from Montgomery, ticipated in the league events.

GRUNDY CHAMPIONS AID FOR VETERANS

Says He Follows Lead of Reed
in Legislation Affecting Former Soldiers

OUTLINES HIS VIEWS

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 30.—The veterans of the World War will have a champion for legislation in favor of their welfare if Senator Joseph R.
Grundy is returned to the United States Senate by the people of Pennsylvania.

The Constitution and all its amendments, including the discussion-torn Eighteenth, will be protected by the Bristol man if he continues his official attendance at Senate sessions. Mr.
Grundy told prominent Philadelphia women yesterday who were present at the eleventh annual luncheon of the Republican Women of the Forty-second Ward at the Oak Lane Review Club.

Though Senator Grundy devoted most of his address to a discussion of the tariff, declaring that the present tariff law is preferable to the pending
bill, he discussed in detail two questions put to him before the luncheon by Mrs. W. Ellis Groben, chairman of the Republican Women of the Forty-second Ward and chairman of women's activities in Philadelphia for the Grundy primary campaign. Mrs. Gro-ben had asked the Senator to tell his stand on the question of the World War veterans and of the much-mooted problem of prohibition.

In so far as the first question is concerned, Senator Grundy asserted that his opinions concur with the "sympathetic attitude" of Senator David A.
Reed toward the World War Veterans.

In respect to the second question asked by Mrs. Groben, Senator Grundy pointed out for the first time in his public address made by him that his viewpoint on law enforcement will at all times be "in harmony with the highest principles of the Republican Party." He indicated that these highest principles of the G. O. P. were formulated at the Kansas City Convention when Herbert Hoover was nominated.

"My induction into the Senate was so involved and complicated a matter
and I had had no previous experience with legislation pertaining to veterans of the World War, that when the matter should come up in the Senate I decided that I should follow the lead of Senator David A. Reed," said Senator Grundy.

"Mr. Reed was a veteran of the late war. He had a wealth of experience with the war itself and he was in entire sympathy with the veterans.
Hence the general proposition which I shall follow in this matter is to pursue the lead outlined by Senator Reed."

"I have been asked concerning my stand on prohibition. I was a delegate to the Kansas City convention. I participated in the convention which decided on the enforcement plank in the platform on which President Hoover was nominated. I spent all of my time at that convention endeavoring to aid in his election and in sending thirty-six Congressmen from Pennsylvania
who would give him full support.

"Of course, having been a part of that convention, I feel that the probi-tion plank in that platform is a binding one on me. If the present committee now investigating this matter gives a report in harmony with the Republican Party platform, I will stand by the report. I now stand unalterably by the Constitution and its amendments, this holds for the Eighteenth, and for all enforcement legislations enacted as the result of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"If elected to the United States Senate, I will stand by the existing order and for any new legislation which may be enacted in harmony with the principles of the Republican platform."

Senator Grundy then turned his attention to the tariff.

"A most unfortunate situation has come about as the result of the pres-

PAYING BY CHECK

The check system of paying employees is becoming increasingly popular throughout the United States. Large firms have adopted it for several reasons: chief among which is the fact that check payments remove the danger of payroll robbery; at the same time encouraging employees to open bank accounts. With minor exceptions, no objections are made to the check system by the workers.

Paying salaries by check should be the rule rather than the exception, yet it is difficult to break away from a tradition as old and well-established as the pay envelope. The wage earner likes to have the feel of money in his pocket, a sensation which a check cannot gratify. Because employees like the jingle of coins and rustle of new paper, thousands of dollars have been lost to payroll handouts, and much more important, hundreds of lives have been lost in defense of the payroll satchel. The handling of large sums of money is always attended with risk, and introduction of salary payments by check throughout the country would save many lives every year.

Of equal importance is the fact that the wage earner, presented with a check in payment for his services, is almost inevitably brought within the doors of the bank. Possibly at first he will not open an account, utilizing the services of the bank only to trade his check for currency. The transaction, however, establishes business relations between the bank and worker; and in due time the latter may be persuaded—to his own benefit—to open an account. Thus the fundamental principles of thrift may be inculcated.

If Patrick Henry, when he said "Give me liberty or give me death!" had been asked to define liberty by the particular restraints which he found more grievous to be borne than death itself, he would doubtless have named those which a few months later were recited in the Declaration of Independence. Yet while the specific complaints were laid against "a prince whose character was marked by any act which may define a tyrant," there was no clear definition of the liberty which, second to life itself, was declared to be the inalienable right with which man has been endowed.

Bills of rights give assurance to the individual of the preservation of his liberty, but they do not define the liberty they promise. The defining has been done by the courts, lawmakers and public opinion.

Somewhere the line must be drawn for liberty is in the most literal sense the negation of the law, law being restraint and the absence of all restraint anarchy. To fix the line which will give the individual and the group scope and opportunity for harmonious development is the overshadowing problem of liberty and law.

SYNOPSIS

Robbed of his savings while drunk by O'Shane, stove-keeper in a white settlement in New Guinea, David Wade finds Stella Blackney greatly interested in him. She cares for him until he sobers up, tells him that she is secretly the wife of a white man, whom she loathes and whom she knows is only waiting till her mother's death, by the terms of her mother's bargain with him, to claim his marital rights. She appeals to Wade to save her from such a fate by taking her away with him. She gets the money O'Shane had stolen from Wade and they sail to Motogora, a South Sea island. The first person Stella encounters is Moira, daughter of a white man, and a native woman.

CHAPTER V—Continued
"Worse off, in fact," said Moira. "The natives won't have me as one of themselves, as I told you; and I don't want them to, either. If I had not been schooled, it might have been different; I might have been content to become as they—if they would have allowed me. But the schooling had separated me too far from them. I am not a savage. I am more civilized than black. I have had developed in me feelings and sensibilities and refinements of which they know nothing. You understand that, don't you? God, it is not hard to understand! And as for the whites—"
"There was a tremendous expressiveness in the manner in which she left the sentence unfinished."
"I am a betwixt and between, neither one thing nor the other, a person without status or standing."

a child might stroke the fingers of its mother. There was something intensely pathetic in the action. She looked into the "white girl's eyes and smiled faintly."
"There is only one thing that can help me," she said presently, very slowly.
"And that is?"
"You know how it is in the islands. A half-caste is no longer a half-caste if she is the wife of a white man."
"That is so."
"She gets exactly the same consideration and treatment as a white woman. The fact of her black blood is politely ignored; indeed, people go to all kinds of trouble to make her feel perfectly easy about it. I know quite a number of half-caste girls like that, and so do you, I expect."

"Why don't you marry, then? It seems an easy way out."
"An easy way out!" Moira repeated.
"Why, any number of men would only be too glad—"
Moira laughed bitterly.
"The settlement fellows! Do you think I'd have one of them? They are only sex-struck, as I told you; and if one of them did marry me, he would soon tire of me. They are the only kind who marry half-castes. I want something different from a sex-struck degenerate. I want a man who will love and respect me and honor me for myself—not a person who lusts after me just because I am young and attractive. I want the respect of my husband as well as the respect of others. I want to be able to love him."

She paused. A vibrant ripple of the tide splashed against the outer side. One of the canoemen stretched himself on the hatch preparatory to going to sleep. Lo-orn approached, to see if her mistress wanted anything. One of the canoemen had given her a croton-leaf of red and gold and she had stuck it in her hair. Stella waved her away.
"I am asking a lot, you think?" came Moira's vibrant voice. "Why shouldn't I ask it? If I am only half a white woman, I am a whole woman for all that. I have a right to happiness and to love."

There was another pause, and then:
"I have as much right to a night, clean-living man as anyone else."
"A straight, clean-living man!" Stella repeated. A sudden flash of fire tore through her brain, inflicting a pain so nearly physical that she cried aloud.
"What is the matter?" asked Moira.
"Nothing! The heat, I think. I am better now. Quite better."

The half-caste was all concern for her.
"I have worried you with my troubles. I shouldn't have done it. I had no business to burden it all on you. It was just that I had to tell someone, and you were so sympathetic. Sit down again. I'll get you made to bring a fan. I'll fan you. The heat is certainly stifling—"
Her arm went about Stella's waist, supporting her.
Stella drew away from her. The knowledge that David was held to her only by sex-attraction and chivalry born down upon her like some repellent and fearsome insistent monster it was a dangerously trail string by which to hold a man. It was no real tie at all. What if this vivid, picturesque and emotionally powerful half-caste discovered that David was not bound in marriage? Certainly no consideration for Stella's feelings could stay her. A woman who felt her position as keenly as she did would be utterly unscrupulous. And would David be able to resist her? Would he? The question was like a knife thrust in the brain. It was not very difficult to render David susceptible. She herself had proved it. Otherwise she wouldn't be here now.

"How long are you staying here?" she asked.
"Are you quite sure you are better? Yes? We expect to be here indefinitely—that is to say, until the pearling is worked out, and that won't be for months yet. We shall see a lot of one another, I hope. I think it is wonderful that at last I have found a friend."

"But we may not settle here," said Stella quickly.
"Why?" There was dismay in the half-caste's tone.
"The island may not be suitable, I mean, we have just arrived, and my husband has gone ashore to have a first look at the place. There might be all kinds of things wrong with it."

"You will find there is nothing wrong with it at all," said Moira confidently. "It is a good place for trading."

David was held to her only by her sex-attraction.

a nothing—not a half-caste, but a no-caste! Back there at school it was bad enough; but here—here—in my own islands—in the settlements and little towns, it's far worse! God, how I hate it when we go near one of those places!"
"It is not much fun sailing the coasts with Dad and never meeting anyone; the emptiness and loneliness of it drive me nearly crazy at times. But it is better than being in one of those wretched settlements. Those settlement whites! Catch them treating me as their own! Catch any white woman in the islands asking me to afternoon tea!"
Not even a missionary wife! She was standing very erectly, with shoulders well back, a splendid figure against the blue background of the sea.

"And the men—to the men I am only a plaything, fair game! You, because you are white, have a claim to their honor and respect. I, because I am half-caste, have a claim only to the dirty sides of their natures. I am a woman, young, handsome, vigorous—that is all I mean to them; and all they want from me is a thing, and when they find they can't get it they call me a stuck-up bitch and drop me. I have been through it all often enough. There is neither love nor respect for me!"

She raised her arms wide apart and above her head in a gesture that was bitterness epitomized.
"Black blood! Black blood! It is held against me as though it were a crime I had done! And no criminal was ever punished worse."

She went to the rail. Stella was intensely moved. Desire to help this girl surged within her impulsively. A lump was in her throat, and her eyes were full.

She rose, went to the other, and put an arm about her.
"Oh, my dear!" she said, inwardly lamenting her lack of adequate expression. "I am—" She was about to say "so sorry for you," but stopped in time, remembering how Moira detested pity. She corrected it to:

"I am eager to help you. Is there anything I can do?" She felt it was an unbecoming offer, for she could not see what she could do. "Nothing would be too much trouble, you know."

The half-caste did not speak. Her hand played with Stella's fingers, round her waist, stroking them as There's an atmosphere of distinction to concrete streets which accords well with the character of the homes, and their owners, in the better parts of the city and suburbs.

Symmetrical, staunch concrete curbs provide smart-looking borders and conform perfectly to gracefully curving roadways so typical of the better suburbs.

Concrete makes for safety, too, for rubber tires grip its smooth but grippy surface. And concrete streets are permanent, requiring a minimum of maintenance.

ent Tariff bill," continued the Senator. "As the result of the activities of the Tariff Commission, the attention of members of Congress has been taken away from the tariff. Members have unloaded their responsibility toward the tariff on the Commission. Congress itself seems very glad to forget the tariff because it is so easy to get money from the income tax."

At this point Senator Grundy indicated that a high protective tariff would bring sufficient revenue into the Governmental coffers so that there would be a possibility of lowering taxes. He said Pennsylvania now has too great a tax burden.

In her introductory remarks Mrs. Groben called the present tariff bill a "Dutch dike" type of legislation, filled with loopholes that may let the waters of disaster in to swamp industry in this country if the bill is passed.

Other speakers at the luncheon were Frank Gorman, who is managing the Grundy campaign; Horace Wolstenholme and Mrs. John Hanna Cross, candidate for the Republican State Committee.

sidewalks, and which number is gradually increasing. The streets are well lighted and water is pumped to the upper end of the town from Lang-home; and private electric pumps for water supply in the majority of homes, and gas connections in every part of the borough, make for convenience.

There are in the line of mercantile establishments three stores, a harness maker's shop, two refreshments stands operated in the summer, one garage, the Hulmeville hotel, three florists' establishments.

Much in the line of exercise and amusement in the physical field is to be enjoyed in the town. The Neshaminy furnishes bathing, boating and fishing, in occasional years when weather is colder than usual. A tennis court is located at the rear of the M. E.

Church, the club in charge of same being open to all. Within the past few weeks a roller skating rink has been opened at Hulmeville park, to be continued during the summer months, and many are gaining interest in this fine sport. In season there is coasting on the hills about the town.

Some idea of the growth of the borough in the lower Neshaminy valley can be gained through consideration of the fact that approximately 60 houses have been built there in the past eight years. Some of these have been erected for Hulmeville residents, while in many folks from nearby cities are making their homes.

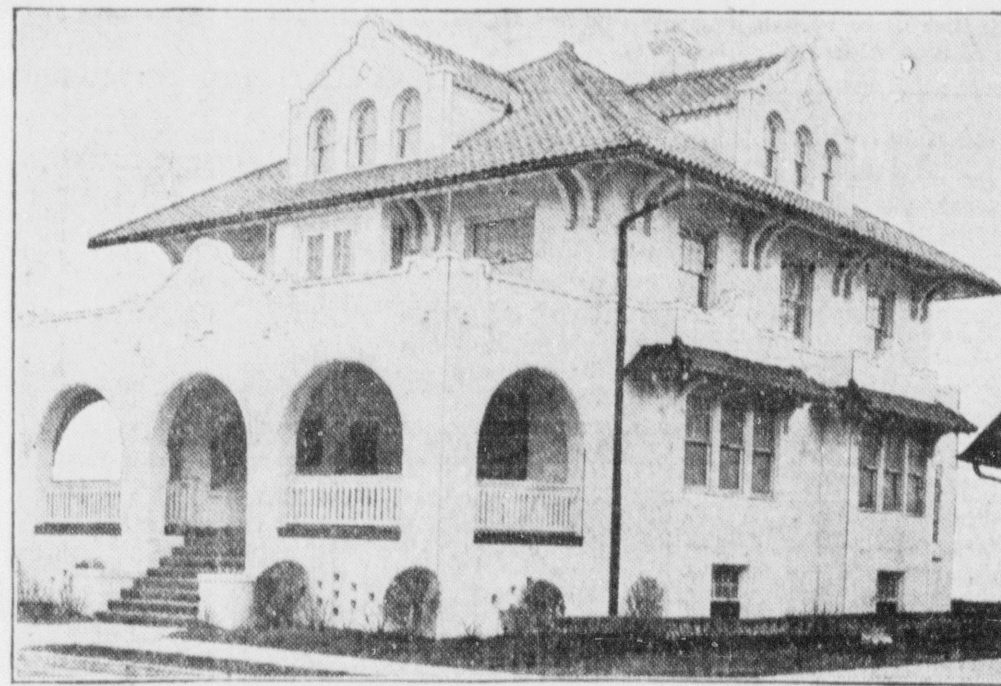

With such a background as has been recalled, with such strides in business and home-making as there have been in the past decade, with active church and civic organizations, Hulmeville has a bright future. Community pride and spirit, it is believed, will help in the years to come.

NEWPORTVILLE

The Newportville Fire Co., No. 1, will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday evening, May 1st. Nomination of officers for the third year of this company will be made at this time.

Shall the Philadelphia Gang Control the State?CHARLES B. HALL

Member of the
Atterbury-Cunningham-Hall-Salus
Philadelphia Machine

Hall's $75,000 "Cottage" in Atlantic City

Charles B. Hall is a professional politician. He has been upon the pay-roll of the City of Philadelphia for 40 years, but no public office he has held has paid more than $5,000 a year. He is reputed to be a multi-millionaire.

Atterbury-Cunningham-Hall-Salus want to name their own United States Senator, control the Commonwealth, exploit its treasury, dictate the personnel and policy of the Public Service Commission, and dominate the Supreme Court of the State.

Their hand-picked candidates—picked by the Gang in the office of Atterbury, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and at other places where Atterbury and a member of the State Supreme Court have conferred with the Gang leaders, are:

JAMES J. DAVIS
For U. S. Senator

FRANCIS SHUNK BROWN
For Governor

GEORGE W. MAXEY
For Justice of Supreme Court

Charles B. Hall has been president of Council in Philadelphia and is now chairman of Council's Finance Committee. Under the domination of the Atterbury-Cunningham-Hall-Salus Machine, Philadelphia has a bonded indebtedness today of $650,000,000, or approximately three times that which brought Chicago to the verge of bankruptcy.

Citizens of Pennsylvania—YOU PAY THE STATE'S BILLS!

If you want that kind of government foisted upon your State, vote for the above candidates and help Atterbury carry out his plan to make Hall the nominal State leader.

After 8 years of freedom from waste and extravagance, graft and corruption of professional politics, the State is not only operating on the pay-as-you-go plan and carrying forward great public projects from current revenues, but has millions in its General Fund.

UPON THE OTHER HAND, PHILADELPHIA HAS BEEN MILKED DRY!

On March 15th, Hall was quoted by the newspapers as saying: "The city finances must be strengthened, and the best way to get it done as it should be is to get a Philadelphian for Governor."

What did Hall mean? He explained his own statement.

"As for the State of Pennsylvania," he was quoted as saying, "it is drunk with money."

ISN'T THAT SERVING NOTICE?Citizens of Pennsylvania, Watch Your Step!

Yet it was of this system, its corrupt record of the past and its vicious purposes of the future, that James J. Davis, candidate of the Atterbury-Cunningham-Hall-Salus Machine for U. S. Senator, and supposed friend of the wage-earners, said in the newspapers of March 31st:

"I always have been aligned with the group that has stood for the best in government that the mind of man could devise."

CONTRAST THAT WITH THE COURAGEOUS POSITION TAKEN BY

U. S. SENATOR JOSEPH R. GRUNDY!

As a candidate to succeed himself, he flatly refused to enter into any deal or alliance with the Atterbury-Cunningham-Hall-Salus Machine, although he was offered 250,000 "controlled votes" if he would become the Senatorial candidate of that group.

JOSEPH R. GRUNDY is fighting for honesty, decency and efficiency in public life. He is fighting to save Pennsylvania from the control of professional politicians.

MY IDEA OF PERFECT HAPPINESS

To live in a moss covered, solitary log-cabin, along some evergreen, tree-bordered lake, where every morning, the sunshine would hit the front door smack in the face, ricochet off the window-pane to rest comfortably on the wall and my nose.

To turn lazily over on my pillow, bough bed, with ear wide awake for the morning song of all the wild birds that love the same things I do.

To slip softly out, into the dew laden, new day, filling my lungs with air that only the trees and wild flowers had kissed.

To lean alongside some giant monarch of the woods and feel its strong, vigorous, quiet, masterfulness permeate every particle of my body. My being, reborn and forgetting.

The Governor called a meeting today of his Citizens' Committee appointed to make a survey of the State's institutional needs. Meanwhile he was going ahead with plans for immediate temporary facilities for relieving crowded conditions at the penitentiary. Available for this work is $100,000 appropriated by the State Board of Control. Construction will include a new roof over several cell blocks and a general fireproofing of the institution.

FORTY RACING CARS
IN SPEEDWAY TEST

LANGHORNE, April 30th.—Three more days remain until the qualifying rounds of the 100-mile championship automobile race will get under way on the Langhorne Speedway. Upwards of forty of the finest racing cars in the world will be at the track here on Thursday morning for the opening of the trials.

At noon Thursday the trials will start and will continue until Friday at 5 p. m. The championship race will start at 3.30 Saturday afternoon on daylight saving time. Only the eighteen fastest cars in the trials will compete in the championship race.

The entries were completed yesterday and the list is the largest that ever registered for a championship race in the Philadelphia section.

Racing devices are to witness the ultimate in speed and competition when the stellar field gets away in the long grind. It is the first championship race of the 1930 season, with the winners getting the jump on the field in point standing prior to the running of Indianapolis which which has always been the first championship event of the year.

To pick a favorite in next Saturday's race is a tough undertaking. Even some of the old-time favorites who are coming back to take a shot will be forced to run in record breaking time to force their way into the select circle of qualifiers.

Among the favorites who will attempt to qualify on Thursday and Friday are Fred Wynn, Jimmy Gleason, Zeke Meyer and Russell Snowberger, of Philadelphia, while among the prominent out-of-town contingent will be Fred Frame, of Los Angeles; Bob Robinson, of Daytona Beach, Florida; Deacon Litz, Bill Albertson, Al Stewart, Ralph DePalma, who is entering his twenty-second year of competition, Herman Schurch, Firman Lawshe, Lou Shingles, and many others.

An inspection of the track this week reveals that it is in the best of condition with a surface that is entirely smooth and free from rolling bumps which have spelled disaster for so many drivers in the past.

Best of all, spectators will for once see a race over a dustless track for the application of thousands of gallons of oil has made the surface perfect for high speed without dust.

From north and south, east and west, have come the speedsters to open the Langhorne Speedway for the first time to an official A. A. A. racing event, the highest type in the world today.

In spite of the many stars that are entered the fans in this section and adjoining cities are looking for the so-called youngsters at the game to come through with some nifty racing.

Barney Oldfield will be the official starter. Joe Dawson, who a number of years ago was a star pilot himself, will represent the contest board.

the American Automobile Association. The honorary referee will be Charles P. Clark, general manager of the A. A. A. John Brock, of Trenton, is referee, while Major E. B. Allen, of Flemington, N. J., and A. H. Hatafy, of New York, will be the judges. The timing will be handled by J. Fred Margerum, of Trenton, and Paul Pommer, of Altoona, will be the official scorer.

The public will be able to witness the qualifying rounds on Thursday and Friday for a nominal charge. The gates of the Speedway will be open on the qualifying days at 10 a. m.

Temple High Trounced
By Bristol High Nine

Its start. Stropm nicked the first ball pitched for a long two-base hit. DeLorenzo hit to second and was safe when Cotton dropped the throw. Stallone singled to right, counting Stropm and DeLorenzo. Stallone stole second and went to third when Crossan made a wild pitch. McCurry was passed. On a double steal, Stallone scored and McCurry was thrown out at second.

Lafferty received a free pass to first. Niccol was hit with a pitched ball. Lafferty stole third on the next pitch. Reese walked, filling the sacks. Tranotti slammed a hit to center, scoring Lafferty and Niccol. Pico was passed, again loading the cossacks. Reese came home on another wild pitch and when Stropm was passed the bases were loaded again. DeLorenzo walked for the second time, forcing in Tranotti with the seventh run of the inning.

Matthews relieved Crossan as the Temple moundman. Stallone hit to Temple, who threw too late to get Pico at the plate. Lafferty singled to left, scoring Stropm and Reese with runs number nine and ten. Stallone was out on third on the hit.

After Brown fanned to start the second frame, Bleiler was passed. On the hit and run play Matthews singled past Pico, scoring Bleiler. Matthews went out trying to steal second, Lafferty to Pico. Scott struck out.

The home team came across with four more tallies in the second. Niccol was again struck with a pitched ball. Reese was passed. Tranotti and Pico went out. Stropm was passed. Niccol scored on a wild pitch. DeLorenzo also was given a free ride to first base, filling the cushions with Bristol players. Stallone doubled against the high school "gym", scoring Reese, Stropm and DeLorenzo. McCurry whiffed.

Temple filled the bases with one out in the next inning, but Tranotti tightened up and no scoring was done. Niccol's single was the only event of the Bristol half.

Temple filled the bases in their fourth but again Tranotti came through and fanned Stern and Gass to retire the side.

In the Bristol part, two hits a walk and Stallone's three-base hit meant two runs.

The boys from Diamond street were very dangerous when Narcisi took the mound in the fifth. Bindid socked the first ball pitched for a long hit to left field. The hit was good for three bags but the runner tried for a homer and was out at the plate on a fine relay. Reese to DeLorenzo, to Stropm, to Lafferty. DeLorenzo tried a shoestring catch of Temple's liner and it got away from him for a home run. Narcisi became nervous and dropped Brown's easy pop fly. Bleiler singled. Matthews struck out. Scott hit to Niccol who errored, scoring two runs. Cotton skied to right field.

A walk to Gass and doubles by Temple and Brown accounted for the Cherry and White's last two runs in the sixth. Box score of the game:

Charming Lines in this Italian Adaptation

House No. 639

THE designer of this attractive house has captured the spirit of the houses of old Italy and has admirably expressed it in face brick, while fitting to the whole the many requirements of the modern home.

Given suitable landscaping, this house easily takes on the individuality and color so desirable in today's homes. With face brick on the exterior walls, the owner is given a choice of wide range in colors which, when selected with a view toward harmony in texture of the brick and color of mortar used, brings outstanding beauty. A most striking feature of the design is the exterior balcony, with its delicate iron rail, projecting over the garage doors and serving to tie the garage to the house in an attractive manner.

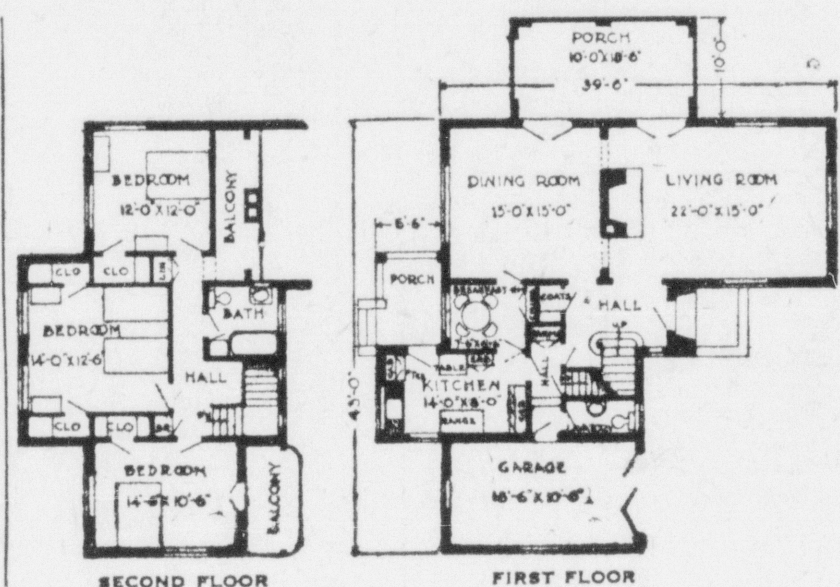

On the first floor, one enters into a hall from which the stairs ascend on the left and arched openings lead to the dining and living rooms on the right. It is in the living room that one feels the Italian influence, for it is the high studio type with balcony and has a hooded fireplace of attractive face brick flanked on either side by arched openings to the dining room. The side porch is connected to both the living and dining rooms by means of casement doors. Between the dining room and kitchen is an attractive breakfast room with a china cabinet. The kitchen is equipped with cabinets and opens onto an ample rear porch. A connecting hall contains a broom closet and affords access to the basement, lavatory, and garage from kitchen or front hall.

The second story has three good-sized bedrooms, two of which have windows on two walls for good cross ventilation. An arched opening leads from the hall to the balcony overlooking the living room. Plenty of closet space and a centrally located bath complete the second floor plan. Sixty-five feet would be the minimum width for the lot on which to build this home. If possible, the garden wall shown in the picture should be added to carry out the effect and to form a closed-in garden. The ceiling heights in this house are 3 feet 6 inches for the first floor, with living room 15 feet; second story is 8 feet. The content of the house is 35,000 cubic feet with full basement.

"Ah — — —," came the clarion note from the throat of Harry Goldenvoice.

"You have passed a very fine examination," continued the good Doctor, "and I have never seen a better set of vocal cords. Of course, you must smoke OLD GOLDS, they keep the throat in perfect condition, and there's not a cough in a carload."
